The Canadian Forum for Social Innovation is a joint venture of the Canadian Science Policy Centre and The/La Collaborative. It convenes social and human sciences and innovation stakeholders across sectors with the purpose of exploring alignment on policy, education and practice that leverage impact-first training and knowledge mobilisation to cater to the needs of nonprofits, social agencies, industry and governments to support social innovation.

Building on emerging consensus, the program will alternate between plenary panels aimed at establishing a shared vision for innovation and social impact as cross-sectoral institutional strategies, with sense-making workshops and consultative roundtables aimed at identifying key action and best-practices, with a focus on capacity building and skills development. The genuinely cross-sectoral setting will provide an opportunity to learn from a variety of perspectives in an effort to reduce barriers to knowledge-driven collaboration and partnerships and increase around universities' place-based connectivity to streamline impact and systems change.
